New product: Full flexibility with Ballistol VarioFlex

BALLISTOL has launched a new spray head model that can be used and used across industries and types, from the all-rounder to the classic hobbyist to the professional user. The "VarioFlex" titled, flexible spray head is first delivered with the classic Ballistol universal oil on a 350 ml spray can.

"The market has been waiting for a solution like VarioFlex for a long time and we are confident that it will impress with its flexibility and ease of use," explains managing director Andreas Zettler. But what exactly makes the VarioFlex so interesting? Many oil spray cans have a spray head that ejects a spray. Some are additionally equipped with a rigid spray pipe. This has proven itself for many years. But in the course of continuously improving products, at BALLISTOL one has literally been conceived "around the corner". The VarioFlex has a flexible spray hose that can be bent and adjusted individually. Thus a mechanic, worker or do-it-yourselfer reaches every hidden screw or inaccessible corner which could not be hit before. The VarioFlex sprays precisely and can be finely dosed.

If a larger area needs to be sprayed, the flexible spray hose is easy to fold down and the familiar fine spray mist can be applied. A powerful solution with simple double application, easy handling and a wide range of applications.

Special highlight: The VarioFlex can be used on all BALLISTOL standard spray cans of any size. Simply remove it of the used can, put it on a new one and fix it with a short but strong blow from above. It is directly ready for use again.
